In addition to this, large supplies of provisions are being sent to various points in Arkansas and Mississippi, where it is possible for the ref-ugees to be eared for on higher ground and in relief barges. The utmost that can be done by these efforts is to measurably and temporarily relieve the present suffering. The committee have found it very difficult and very costly to reach a great portion of the sufferers, living in the interior, who can only be reached by skiffs operating with light-draught steamers that can leave the main river.
